JOKE ON THE ENGINEER.

[From the New London Day.] (From the New London Day.)

Chas. Decker, an engineer on the Vermont Central railroad, is an enthusiastic silver man and his fellow railroad men played a little trick on him the other day. When his engine was taken out of the house at Bratteboro and attached to the train he noticed from the looks of the men that something was in the wind. The suppresser pleasure became so noticeable at last that he smelled a rat and getting off his seat in the cab took a look over the engine. When he reached the front he soon discovered what caused the merriment, for the front of the headlight was decorated with a large picture of McKinfer. He immediately removed the decoration and now the boys are wishing they had controlled their emotions better, so that he would have carried the picture down the road with him.

The social committee of the Christian Endeavor society of the Congregational church, Miss Minerva Tyler chairman, gave a very enjoyable entertainment in the parlors last evening. A soap bubble contest, a cobweb party and a piano solo by Miss Lucia Foster were the substance of the evening's amusement. D. W. Truss & Co., the well-known theatrical managers of New York, are the sole owners and managers of the great comic opera success, "Wang," which will come to the Auditorium next Thursday evening. This itself is a guarantee of the excellence of the performance. The fact that 100 costumes are used by the chorus alone gives an idea of the elaborateness with which the opera is staged. Geo. B. Hitt, who returned Wednesday night from a trip to Minneapolis taken in the interest of holders of Kelley securities, confirms the reports already given of the condition of the firm's affairs. The assets of the firm, as shown in the list filed by the assignees, consist largely of equities and many of these equities, it is feared, will prove to be of doubtful value when carefully appraised. The assignees will make the best settlement of the estate which is possible, but it is doubtful if, aft er paying its expenses, a very large percen age will be realized. The large volume of loans which were conservatively made by the Kelleys, and are still in force, are not affected by the assignment. The losses will fall upon those holding loans which have been paid to the Kelleys, and for which remittances were not made.

The will of the late ex-Gov. Fuller as filed at the probate office, bequeaths to his brother, George W. Fuller, $1000, together with the testator's interest in the property and estate of his father, Washington Fuiler. To the latter he also bequeaths $1000. To Anna Maud Essex he gives $10,000, and to each of the children of George W. Fuller $1000. To the Vermont Academy at Saxtons River is given $3000 to be used toward building a hospital for the use and benefit of the Academy, in memory of Mrs. Desdemona Estey, wife of the late Deacon Jacob Estey. who died two years ago. VALLEY FAIR POULTRY.

[I. K. Felch in a letter to Farm-Poultry.] It is quite a plume for a town of 6000 inhabitants to be so popular as to draw an ettendance to their fair of nearly 12,000 people in a day. The town was decorated with thousands of yards of ounting, covering every store, bank, hotel and residence for the mile and a half to the grounds. It was also a plume for the patriotism of Brattle boro's inhabitants and friends to create a coaching parade that completely circled the race track—and all this without the incentive of a prize offered, and every individual in the line paying his or her little 35 cents to enter the grounds. It was a parade which, for merit and beauty, did not suffer in comparison with the best the writer ever saw.

suffer in comparison with the best the writer ever saw.

I am a poultry man and must confine myself in what I have to say to that department. At this exhibition the American class always excels, and their barred Plymouth Rocks are the equal of any show in America. There were specimens there with beak and legs as bright and clear as burnished gold, or as yellow as the deepest colored Jersey butter ever made. There was a male on exhibition that for shape no man ever saw better; and pullets by the dozen which were the envy of many a breeder.

and pullets by the dozen which were the envy of many a breeder.

In White Plymouth Rocks I saw the best white male, and from seven to ten lemales that would hold their own in any exhibition in any state.

It is known that here is the home of the Silver Spangled Hainburgs, the Miner strain), and the first prize pen, it is needless to say, were fine specimens. The king of the White Wyandotte class was a cock of 95 points, with scores of his progeny to please the most fastidious. The Leghorn division, while good, we are forced to say was not quite up to last season, though the numbers were larger.

The Game bantams exhibited by Pierce Brothers, Goddard & Pentland, and others, were a feature in themselves, there being a very large display.

ers. Goddard a rentand, and others were a reature in themselves, there being a very large display.

There is a move on foot in this association, as the fair is in October, to carry the poultry department to that point of excellence seen in our winter shows, serving notice upon all hucksters a d others who do not coop their stock in a pleasing and proper manner, not to give them a position in the line of coops, no matter what the merit in the fowls may be. Brahmas in bantam coops will no longer be tolerated at Brattleboro; and Plymouth Rocks in pigeon pens will not be considered—and that is right. This association furnishes good quarters, and they will be greatly improved; so we bespeak a vast improvement in the department for 1897.

The breeders of the vicinity heid an enthusiastic meeting on the night of October I, when they unanimously endorsed the use of the decimal score card—the plan of awarding only three compulsory prizes with the supplemental system of merit awards to all specimens scoring within one point of the money, and classification of the divisions, believing that they would be, by their use, better able to give larger prizes and secure better protection for both management and competition by so doing.
